Intestinal Indigestion

ing from the Inability to Digest Starchy Foods.

There are a great many persons who are victims of what is known as intestinal indigestion, a disease which is due to the fact that the starchy foods are either partially digested or not digested at all, and the result of this trouble may be either an obstinate constipation or a persistent diarrhoea.

This inability to digest starch is called "amylaceous dyspepsia," a disease which is much in evidence. Americans are notoriously poor digesters of ease which is much in evidence. Americans are notoriously poor digesters of starch, and as starchy foods, such as potatoes, rice, bread, &c., are digested entirely in the small intestine, and not in the stomach proper, as is generally supposed, it can be readily seen how intestinal indigestion will usually produce diarrhoea.

In the small intestine the pancreatic juice acts upon the starches and ordinarily, in a state of health, possesses the power of converting them into grape sugar and dextrine. Starch must be so transformed before it can be of use to the animal being. Remaining as unchanged starch, it either passes through the alimentary canal, and proves a useless burden to the system, because it resists absorption, or it causes intestinal the alimentary canal, and proves a use-less burden to the system, because it resists absorption, or it causes intestinal indigestion, the food products becoming acrid through putrefaction, which often sets up a catarrhal inflammation of the intestine, resulting in diarrhoea.

In a complaint of this character many persons use paregoric, Squibb's, bismuth, and tannin to relieve the diarrhoea, all of these remedies being powerfully astringent, and they stop the trouble suddenly, "locking up" the morbid secretions throwing the toxic intestinal polson back on the system, and often causing death through auto-intoxication.
